About the Artist

Lynne Furrer took her first watercolor class to apply painting techniques to her photography. Instead, she fell in love with the flow of water and its magical attraction to pigment on paper! Her loose, semi-abstract style transforms the representational into the mysterious. Lynne works out of a studio she shares with her photographer husband near Denver, Colorado.

Artist Statement

My images are like stories I author using mediums such as watercolor, oil, mixed media and encaustics. I believe the world is connected in a spiritual way which can be communicated through art. When these connections are made between myself and others, we harness the ability to speak a common language which uses more than words to open the path to our collective consciousness. This unified force allows us to share more richly and deeply about our experiences and journey through life.
